

Be Ready for an Emergency

Provide yourself or a someone living alone the ability to share their critical medical and contact information in a crisis, even when they can't.

An injury or medical issue can happen at any time. During the calendar year 2014, the Fire Services Ambulance Command responded to 747,437 calls. With a daily average of 1,840 patients across Hong Kong, the first person responding to an emergency call needs to work effectively.

You can give yourself or an elderly person living on their own the ability to assist the first responder and have a greatly improved chance to prevent medical errors by preparing information describing individual medical needs. This information can be vital during the "golden hour" where prompt medical treatment can avoid bigger crisis.

The S+ First Response Kit logically describes your contacts and individual conditions including medical history, medication, allergy and special needs. The kit delivers critical information when someone may not be able to provide it clearly themselves due their condition or confusion at the time.

Fill one in today or use the S+ Personal Emergency Information template on line to care for yourself and a loved one - its smart and its free.

The image displays two pages of the S+ Personal Emergency Information form. The left page, titled 'Personal Information', includes fields for the user's name, address, phone number, and medical history. The right page, titled 'Medical History', features checkboxes for various medical conditions such as heart disease, diabetes, and allergies, along with a section for emergency contacts.
